prayer had been offered, Captain Wilbur gave an interesting talk on the greatest sacrifice ever offered by man to God. He took his sermon from the story of the offering of Isaac by Abraham, his father, to God. He said in part. God promised Abraham that his son, Isaac, should be a great leader among his people, should conquer and rule great nations. Later God commanded Abraram to take his beloved son up into the mountain where he should offer him up to God on a burning altar. This command was to test Abraham's faith and trust in God. Although Abraham may have been tempted to turn aside from God's comman by his neighbors and friends, he put the greatest faith in God and began to make preparations for the sacrifice. The old man then explained to Isaac that he was the offering, telling his son that he had been commanded by God to make the offering. As he raised the knife over the body of Isaac an angel's arm deferred the fatal blow and a ram was seen near by. The voice of God commanded Abraham not to slay his son, but to take and offer up the ram. This was the greatest test possible of the faith of Abraham, and showed no matter what happened that he always put trust in the word of God. The speaker also said that if God had commanded Abraham himself to be offered up, that he would gladly have given his life to God.

It is expected that many Greeks from Connecticut and western Massachusetts will be ready to leave imme-diately for New York, to offer their services through the Greek consul there.

The Greek army is organized on a reserve basis. Every young Greek is required to serve a certain term in the national army of that nation, and at the conclusion of his service he pusses to the reserves, the understanding being that he is to be ready to respond to a call of arms should any emergency arise. The Greek "reservises" have already been called to the colors, and all Greece is, according to press reports, making preparations for war.

There are more than 100 Greeks in New Britain, while Middletown has nearly as many.
